Downing-Street, November 23, 1799.

A LETTER, of which the following is a Copy, has been received by Lieutenant-Colonel the Honorable Alexander Hope, Deputy Adjutant-General to the Army lately ſerving in Holland, from Lieutenant-General Sir James Pulteney, Baronet, and, by Order of His Royal Highneſs the Commander in Chief, tranſmitted by him to the Right Honorable Henry Dundas, One of His Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State.

SIR, Swan Cutter, at Sea, Nov. 20, 1799.

I Have from Time to Time reported to you, for the Information of His Royal Highneſs the Commander in Chief, the Progreſs which had been made in the Embarkation and Departure of the Britiſh and Ruſſian Troops which were left under my Command, in the Province of North Holland; and I am now happy to acquaint you, that the laſt of them embarked Yeſterday Morning, when the Wind being fair, the Whole of the Ships of War and Tranſports remaining in the Texel left that Port.

Every Thing belonging to the Army was brought off excepting a ſmall Proportion of damaged Proviſions, a few Waggons, and about Three Hundred Draught Horſes of little Value, for which there was no Tonnage; of theſe the latter alone were ſaleable, but they bore ſo ſmall a Price, that I thought it better to diſtribute the Whole to the Magiſtrates of the different Villages in and near which the Army had been cantoned, to be delivered to any of the Inhabitants who might have ſuffered from the inevitable Conſequences of War.

Several large Dutch Indiamen and other Ships, which it was impoſſible for us to remove in their preſent State, but which might have been fitted out as Ships of War by the Enemy, were completely diſabled and rendered uſeleſs for any further Purpoſe, through the Exertions of a Detachment of Seamen, under the Direction of Captain Bovar. The Deſire of complying moſt ſtrictly with the Articles of the Agreement entered into between His Royal Highneſs and General Brune, prevented their being blown up, which could not have been done without endangering the Navigation of the Nieuwe Diep.

Vice-Admiral Dickſon, as well as myſelf, made it our Study to comply in this, as in every other Inſtance, with the Articles of the Agreement, and I muſt do the French General the Juſtice to ſay, that he ſeemed actuated by the ſame Spirit.

Previous to quitting the Helder, I had, in obedidience to His Royal Highneſs's Inſtructions, diſcharged every juſt Demand of the Inhabitants of the Country which has been occupied by the Army; and I was happy to find that very few Claims were brought forward beyond thoſe which it was in my Power to ſatisfy.

The Embarkation of the Troops, difficult from the Multiplicity of the Arrangements required, and ſometimes arduous from the State of the Weather, was carried on with the utmoſt Zeal and Activity by Vice-Admiral Dickſon, and the Officers and Seamen under his Command. I feel particularly indebted to Captain Lawford of His Majeſty's Ship Romney, who was left on Shore, and had the immediate Direction of the Embarkation, for his Exertions and his Attention to every Branch of His Majeſty's Service, and to Captain Woodriffe, principal Agent of the Tranſport Service, for his great Zeal in the Execution of the Duties of that Situation.

I have the Honor to be, &c.

JAMES PULTENEY.

The Honorable Colonel Hope, Adjutant-General, &c. &c. &c.

P. S. Three Armed Veſſels have been left to cruize off the Texel to give Warning to any Britiſh Ships of our having evacuated the Port.

It was agreed by the French General, that if any ſhould arrive previous to the Expiration of the Month, they ſhould, as a Matter of courſe, be allowed to depart.

Supplement to the Account of the Armiſtice concluded between His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York and General Brune, publiſhed in the Gazette of the 26th Ultimo.

Head-Quarters, Schagen-Brug,

GENERAL, October 15, 1799.

THE late Hour at which your Letter reached me laſt Night, prevented my ſending ſooner to Alkmaar Major-General Knox, the Officer alluded to in my Letter of Yeſterday's Date. He is entirely in my Confidence, and is fully authorized to treat and conclude with you on the Subject reſpecting which he has received my Inſtructions.

(Signed) FREDERICK Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army.

To General Brune, Commander in Chief, &c. &c. &c.

Head-Quarters, Schagen Brug, October 15, 1799.

BY virtue of the Authority, and in obedience to the Order of His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army, Major-General Knox will have the Honor of communicating with General Brune, Commander in Chief of the French and Batavian Army, and of ſtating to him,

That in conſequence of the Difficulties ariſing from the very unfavourable and unuſual State of the Weather at this Seaſon, we have judged it expedient to re-occupy the Poſition of the Zuyp.

That in this Situation, with Cantonments amply adequate to the Amount of our Forces, having an uninterrupted and certain Means of keeping up our Communication with England, and Maſters as we are of the Helder, the Texel, the Zuyder Zee, and the Ocean, it depends upon us either to await the Period when a favourable Change of Weather and of Circumſtances may enable us to renew offenſive Operations, or to withdraw our Army by Degrees and without Riſk from this Country, retaining Poſſeſſion of ſuch detached Points as might be judged moſt favorable for annoying the Enemy, or for ſecuring real Advantages to ourſelves.

In the Event of our recurring to this laſt-mentioned Meaſure, it will become our Duty to neglect no Means which can contribute to the Preſervation of the brave Troops entruſted to our Care, and for this Purpoſe (however diſtreſſing, however ruinous to the Inhabitants, and to the County, the Alternative may be) we ſhall be compelled to avail ourſelves of thoſe dreadful Expedients which it is in our Power to adopt. Having perfectly at our Diſpoſal the Sea Dykes, both towards the Ocean and the Zuyder Zee, as well as the Interior Dykes, we ſhould in that caſe be reduced to the terrible Neceſſity of inundating the whole Country of North Holland, and of adding to this Calamity every deſtructive Evil which muſt neceſſarily reſult from an Attempt to force or interrupt our Retreat. We ſhould, under ſuch Circumſtances, alſo be conſtrained to make uſe of the ample Means we poſſeſs, of rendering the Navigation of the Zuyder Zee henceforth impracticable, by obſtructing the Mars Diep, and deſtroying the Nieuve Diep; Works upon which ſo many Years Labour, and ſuch immenſe Sums have been expended.

Our Syſtem of carrying on War having on all Occaſions been governed by the moſt liberal Principles, Neceſſity and the ſtrongeſt Senſe of Duty could alone induce us to adopt a Syſtem repugnant to the Sentiments which have ever directed the Conduct of the Engliſh Nation.

From theſe Conſiderations, and from our Perſuaſion that General Brune and the Dutch People muſt be actuated by ſimilar Motives, and equally deſirous to prevent an uſeleſs Effuſion of Blood by the amicable Arrangement of a Point which is perhaps the Object of both Parties, and from our Anxiety, in caſe of a different Reſult, to ſtand juſtified to the whole Univerſe, from whatever Deſtruction may in conſequence devolve upon this Country; we propoſe and offer to General Brune, and to the Batavian Republic, that the Engliſh and Ruſſian Troops ſhall evacuate, before the End of the Month of November next, all the Coaſts, the Iſlands, and the Interior Navigation of Holland, without committing any Act detrimental to the great Sources of its Navigation, or laying the Country under any Inundations.

For this Purpoſe, we propoſe that a Suſpenſion of Hoſtilities ſhall take place until the Period above ſpecified.

That during this Interval we ſhall remain in full Poſſeſſion of all the Points, and of the whole Extent of Country we occupy at this Moment, and that the Line of the reſpective Advanced Poſts ſhall alſo be that of Separation between the Two Armies, and that this Line ſhall not, under any Pretence, be paſſed by the Troops of either, even in the Event of our chooſing to retire from any Part of our preſent Poſition, or of our quitting it altogether.

That during the above-mentioned Interval no Interference ſhall be allowed, nor any Objections be ſtarted, with reſpect to the Conduct of either of the Parties within the Limits of their reſpective Poſſeſſions; and that all the Rights of War (every Act of Hoſtility excepted) ſhall continue mutually in Force.

That we will grant to the Perſons and Property of the Inhabitants of the Country occupied by us, every Protection conſiſtent with Diſcipline, in the Circumſtances under which we are placed, and all the Advantnges which the Conduct generally obſerved by Britiſh Troops entitles them to expect on ſuch an Occaſion.

If theſe Propoſals accord with the Wiſhes and are conformable to the Intentions of General Brune, there can be no Difficulty whatever in carrying them into Execution in Three Days from the Date hereof.

By Order of His Royal Highneſs the Commander in Chief.

Brune General in Chief to the Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army.

GENERAL,

MAJOR-GENERAL KNOX, who was inſtructed to confer with me on your Part, upon the Subject of a Note which he has delivered, ſigned by your Secretary, will communicate my Anſwer contained in an Explanatory Note.

(Signed) Citizen BRUNE, General in Chief of the Combined French and Batavian Army.

Head Quarters at Alkmaar, the 15th of October 1799, the 8th Year of the French Republic.

THE Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the Engliſh Army, propoſes that a Ceſſation of Hoſtilities ſhall take place, in conſequence of the Approach of the inclement Seaſon. He promiſes to withdraw from the Batavian Territory, between the preſent Period and the End of November next, the whole Army under his Command; and conſents that no Damage ſhall be committed, no Sluices opened, or Dykes broken up, on Condition of his Retreat not being moleſted by the French and Batavian Army.

Theſe Motives would not have been brought forward by the Duke of York, if he had conſidered himſelf poſſeſſed of Means ſufficient for advancing into the Country; for in that Caſe, he would have had the Facility of extending his Quarters, of procuring Subſiſtence, and, in ſhort, of placing himſelf beyond the Reach of the Inconveniences ariſing from the unfavourable Seaſon. We ought conſequently to look to Advantages in an Arrangement, proportionate to the Inſufficiency of the Forces under his Command.

The Terms propoſed by the Duke of York contain nothing but what would be the neceſſary Reſult of a Ceſſation of Hoſtilities. It can ſcarcely be ſuppoſed that the Duke of York will cauſe the Dykes to be deſtroyed, the Country to be inundated, and the Villages to be burnt, for the mere Purpoſe of committing ſuch Acts of Violence; as ſuch Conduct would be contrary to the Laws of War, and muſt draw upon him the Reprobation of all Europe and of his own Nation. It appears therefore evident, that the Duke of York would confine himſelf to ſuch Meaſures as might be uſeful to his own Army, or detrimental to ours: but we look upon ſuch Accidents as inſeparable from a State of War. No Object of Advantage to us appears therefore to reſult from the Propoſals which have been made.

Since, however, the Sufferings of Humanity come under the Conſideration of the Duke of York, General Brune is ready to meet this honorable Feeling, and, in doing ſo, declares that the following Stipulations on which he offers to conſent to a Suſpenſion of Hoſtilities are ſo obviouſly juſt, that he cannot depart from them.

I. The Batavian Fleet, which was ſurrendered to Admiral Mitchell by Admiral Story, ſhall be reſtored to the Batavian Republic with its Stores and Crews. In caſe the Duke of York ſhall not be veſted with ſufficient Powers to comply with this Article, His Royal Highneſs ſhall engage to obtain from his Court an equivalent Compenſation.

II. Fifteen Thouſand Priſoners of War, French and Batavians, detained in England, ſhall be unconditionally releaſed and ſent home. The Mode of Selection, and the Proportion for each Country, to be ſettled between the Governments of the Two Republics. The Batavian Admiral De Winter ſhall be conſidered as exchanged.—This Article ſhall in no Degree prejudice or interfere with the Cartel of Exchange at preſent eſtabliſhed.

III. The Batteries and Fort of the Helder ſhall be reſtored in the Condition in which they were found at the Period of the Invaſion of the Engliſh and Ruſſian Army. An Officer of Artillery ſhall be ſent to the Helder by General Brune to ſee that this Article is complied with.

IV. The Army under the Command of the Duke of York ſhall within Forty-eight Hours evacuate the Poſition of the Zuyp; its Advanced Poſts ſhall be withdrawn to the Height of Callants-Oog. The French and Batavian Army ſhall preſerve the Poſitions it occupies at preſent, taking up however its Advanced Poſts at Petten, Crabendam, Schagen-Brug, and Colhorn. It ſhall have merely a Vidette at the Height of Callants-Oog.

V. The Troops compoſing the Engliſh and Ruſſian Army ſhall be embarked ſucceſſively, and as ſpeedily as poſſible. All the Britiſh Shipping ſhall quit the Texel, and all the Engliſh and Ruſſian Troops be withdrawn from the Seas, Coaſts, and Iſlands of the Batavian Republic, before the 20th of November next, and ſhall not damage the great Sources of Navigation or occaſion any Inundation in the Country.

VI. All Ships of War or other Veſſels, having on board Reinforcements for the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army, ſhall put to Sea as ſoon as poſſible, without landing the ſame.

VII. To guarantee the Execution of theſe Articles, Hoſtages ſhall be given by the Duke of York, to be ſelected amongſt the Officers of Rank in his Army.

By Order of General Brune, Commander in Chief of the Combined French and Batavian Army.

HIS Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army, propoſed to General Brune, Commander in Chief of the French and Batavian Army, an Arrangement equally to the Advantage of both Parties, originating in his Deſire to prevent the farther Effuſion of Blood, and to preſerve this Country from the terrible Effects of an Inundation, as alſo from the Deſtruction of the beſt of its Ports, involving the total Ruin of the principal Channels of its Interior Navigation and Commerce.

In anſwer to which General Brune obſerves, that he cannot imagine His Royal Highneſs will recur to Meaſures not leſs revolting to Humanity, than repugnant to the Character of the Britiſh Nation, and to the general Feeling of all Europe.

Devaſtation or Deſtruction is certainly incompatible with the Character and with the uniform Conduct of the Engliſh Nation; and as little do

GENERAL,

I Send back Major-General Knox with my Anſwers to the Explanatory Note which he has delivered to me in your Name. He is fully authorized to conclude on my Part upon every Point which relates to the Subject of his Miſſion.

To General Brune, Commander in Chief, &c. &c. &c.

Head-Quarters, at Schagen Brug, October 17, 1799.

HIS Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army, propoſed to General Brune, Commander in Chief of the French and Batavian Army, an Arrangement equally to the Advantage of both Parties, originating in his Deſire to prevent the farther Effuſion of Blood, and to preſerve this Country from the terrible Effects of an Inundation, as alſo from the Deſtruction of the beſt of its Ports, involving the total Ruin of the principal Channels of its Interior Navigation and Commerce.

In anſwer to which General Brune obſerves, that he cannot imagine His Royal Highneſs will recur to Meaſures not leſs revolting to Humanity, than repugnant to the Character of the Britiſh Nation, and to the general Feeling of all Europe.

Devaſtation or Deſtruction is certainly incompatible with the Character and with the uniform Conduct of the Engliſh Nation; and as little do either accord with the Diſpoſition of His Royal Highneſs the Commander in Chief:—but there are Duties peremptorily preſcribed by the Nature of particular Situations, the Odium of which muſt fall, not on thoſe who execute, but on ſuch as render the Meaſures neceſſary, by rejecting the Conditions of a juſt and honorable Agreement.

Deeply impreſſed with what is due to his Country on the one Hand, and to the Claims of Humanity on the other; perſuaded, likewiſe, that General Brune is equally guided by theſe Sentiments, His Royal Highneſs has taken his Propoſals into Conſideration, and conſents to abide by the Agreement as it ſtands in the Anſwers annexed to the different Articles.

Major-General Knox, who is charged therewith, is authorized to ſign and conclude this Agreement, as well as to arrange any Points of Detail which may ariſe out of it.

It being the Duty of every Officer commanding His Britannic Majeſty's Troops to make an exact Report of whatever relates to his Command, His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York will of courſe lay before the Britiſh Government every Communication which has taken place between His Royal Highneſs and General Brune.

ARTICLES propoſed in the Explanatory Note from General Brune.

Art. I. The Batavian Fleet which was ſurrendered to Admiral Mitchell by Admiral Story, ſhall be reſtored to the Batavian Republic with its Stores and Crews. In caſe the Duke of York ſhall not be veſted with ſufficient Power to comply with this Article, His Royal Highneſs ſhall engage to obtain from his Court an equivalent Compenſation.

Anſwer.—His Royal Highneſs will on no Account treat upon this Article, the Execution of which, it muſt be evident to both Parties, is impoſſible.

Art. II. Fifteen Thouſand Priſoners of War, French and Batavians, detained in England, ſhall be unconditionally releaſed and ſent home. The Mode of Selection, and the Proportion for each Country, to be ſettled between the Governments of the Two Republics. The Batavian Admiral De Winter ſhall be conſidered as exchanged.—This Article ſhall in no Degree prejudice or interfere with the Cartel of Exchange at preſent eſtabliſhed.

Anſwer.—This Demand appears to reſt upon a ſuppoſed Loſs the Combined Army muſt ſuſtain ſhould its Embarkation be reſolved upon. It is by no Means admitted that ſuch would be the Reſult; but as in the Event of the Army's carrying on the Campaign during the Winter, the Loſs of a certain Number of Men muſt naturally be expected; His Royal Highneſs, influenced by this Conſideration, agrees to promiſe in the Name of the Britiſh Government, that Five Thouſand French and Batavian Priſoners, the Proportion of each to be regulated according to the Terms of the Article, ſhall be unconditionally releaſed and ſent home. Nothing further in this Article can be agreed to.

Art. III. The Batteries and Fort of the Helder ſhall be reſtored in the Condition in which they were found at the Period of the Invaſion of the Engliſh and Ruſſian Army. An Officer of Artillery ſhall be ſent to the Helder by General Brune to ſee that this Article is complied with.

Anſwer.—The Fort and Batteries of the Helder will be left, generally conſidered, in an improved State.

None of the Dutch Artillery ſhall be carried away.

Art. IV. The Army under the Command of the Duke of York ſhall within Forty-eight Hours evacuate the Poſition of the Zuyp. Its Advanced Poſts ſhall be withdrawn to the Height of Callants-Oog. The French and Batavian Army ſhall preſerve the Poſitions it occupies at preſent, taking up however its Advanced Poſts at Petten, Crabendam, Schagen Brug, and Colhorn. It ſhall have merely a Vidette at the Height of Callants-Oog.

Anſwer.—On no Account will it be conſented that the Army ſhall be withdrawn from the Poſition of the Zuyp, until every Preparation requiſite to render its Embarkation eaſy and complete can be arranged at the Helder. It muſt be evident, that it cannot be deſirable that any Delay ſhould take place in this Reſpect. No Addition ſhall be made to the Works at the Zuyp, and Perſons properly authoriſed ſhall be admitted from Time to Time to aſcertain and report upon this Point for the Satisfaction of General Brune; but no armed Detachment will be permitted to approach, or to take Poſt, nearer than they already are to our Poſition.

It muſt be further underſtood, that on his Part, General Brune will not allow any Approaches or offenſive Preparations to be carried on, and that the French and Batavian Army ſhall remain in the Line of Advanced Poſts which it occupies at preſent, which ſhall alſo be the Line of Separation between the Two Armies reſpectively.

Art. V. The Troops compoſing the Engliſh and Ruſſian Army ſhall be embarked ſucceſſively, and as ſpeedily as poſſible. All the Britiſh Shipping ſhall quit the Texel, and all the Engliſh and Ruſſian Troops be withdrawn from the Seas, Coaſts, and Iſlands of the Batavian Republic before the 20th of November next, and ſhall not damage the great Sources of Navigation, or occaſion any Inundation in the Country.

Anſwer.—The Embarkation of the Engliſh and Ruſſian Troops will take place with all poſſible Expedition; and at this Seaſon of the Year any unneceſſary Delay will naturally be avoided as much as poſſible: but to prevent any Difficulty or future Diſcuſſion upon this Point, it is propoſed, that the Period of the Suſpenſion of Hoſtilities ſhall be limited to the End of the Month of November next, in order to ſecure ſufficient Time for the complete Evacuation of the Country, which, however, ſhall be effected ſooner, if practicable.

Art. VI. All Ships of War, or other Veſſels, having on board Reinforcements for the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army ſhall put to Sea as ſoon as poſſible, without landing the ſame.

Anſwer.—The Ships of War, or other Veſſels immediately expected with Reinforcements for the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army, or which may hereafter be ſent, ſhall not land their Troops, but ſhall put to Sea again as ſoon as poſſible.

Art. VII. To guarantee the Execution of theſe Clauſes, Hoſtages ſhall be given by the Duke of York, to be ſelected among the Officers of Rank in his Army.

Anſwer.—Hoſtages ſhall be reciprocally given, to be ſelected among the Officers of Rank of the Two Armies, to guarantee the Execution of this Agreement.

By Order of His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the Combined Engliſh and Ruſſian Army.

(Signed) H. TAYLOR, Secretary.

Alkmaar, October 17, 1799.

SIR,

I Have ſeen General Brune, and have talked over with him fully all the Articles on which I have received His Royal Highneſs's Inſtructions. I have found the greateſt Diſpoſition on the Part of General Brune to enter fairly into the Subject.

In reſpect to the eſſential Article of the Fleet, General Brune has already received a Letter from the Dutch Directory, to make the Delivery of it a ſine quâ non; and I much doubt whether there is any Chance of his being brought to give Way on this Point, at leaſt without ſome Aſſurance that His Royal Highneſs would forward the Demand to his Court.

In reſpect to the other very eſſential Article of the Priſoners, after much Converſation, I brought the General to lower his Demand to Eight Thouſand Men, beyond which he cannot recede. Every other Point can be amicably ſettled.

I beg His Royal Highneſs's Orders on theſe Points; and I hope to receive them by Noon Tomorrow.

I have the Honor to be, &c. &c. &c.

(Signed) J. KNOX.

To the Honorable Colonel Hope, Adjutant-General, &c. &c. &c.

Head-Quarters, Schagen Brug, October 18, 1799.

SIR,

HIS Royal Highneſs the Commander in Chief, in his Inſtructions to you of Yeſterday's Date, having declared that every Paper or Propoſal from General Brune, and conſequently that relative to the Whole Dutch Fleet, will of courſe be regularly tranſmitted to England, can give no other Anſwer than what you are already empowered to make, viz.

"His Royal Highneſs will, on no Account, "treat upon this Article; the Execution of "which, it muſt be evident to both Parties, "is impoſſible."

If General Brune expects any Thing further to paſs on that Subject, the ſooner the Negociation is put an End to the better.

In regard to the Number of Priſoners, if every other Point is clearly and immediately decided upon, His Royal Highneſs may be induced to relax; if not, it is unneceſſary to enter further into the Subject; and he directs you to finiſh the Negociation.

I have the Honor to be, &c. &c. &c.

(Signed) ALEX. HOPE,
Deputy Adjutant-General.

The Honorable Major-General Knox, &c. &c. &c

Alkmaar, October 18, 1799.

I have the Honor to be, &c.

(Signed) J. KNOX,
